d. Premium Pay This rule applies with respect to higher rates of pay that are paid at the traditional overtime hourly rate of pay for work on Saturdays, Sundays, or holidays, even though the employee has not worked the normal workweek, because work on these days has been regarded traditionally as overtime and not as part of the normal workweek. Premium Pay is extra compensation paid to employees who work nights, holidays, weekends, other special hours or work under unusual conditions. This premium pay is not considered overtime pay when it is the normal pay for working these shifts. Consider an employee that works a 40-hour night shift at a rate of $15 per hour. The day shift rate of pay for the same work is $10 per hour. No overtime deduction is made from the $15 per hour since this is considered premium pay. If the night shift employee works more than the normal number of hours and receives pay in excess of the normal $15 per hour, that excess is considered overtime. Refer to User's Guide for examples.	Overtime exclusions from payroll for premium pay Rule ID: BM-OVEE-OEA7F Premium pay differs from overtime pay. Premium pay is extra compensation paid to employees who work special hours and days or work under unusual conditions that may traditionally be considered overtime. Special hours and days include Saturdays, Sundays, holidays, nights, or weekends. Even if the employee has not worked the usual workweek, it is considered premium pay, but not overtime, when it is the normal pay for working these shifts. Example of premium pay vs. overtime pay Premium pay: For a workweek of 40 hours, the day shift is paid $10 per hour, and the night shift is paid $15 per hour. Overtime exclusions from payroll are not applied to night-shift pay because this is the typical pay for working night-shift. Instead, it is considered premium pay. Overtime pay: For a night shift employee who works more than the usual workweek of 40 hours and receives an extra amount of pay over the regular rate of $15 per hour for the additional hours, that extra pay is considered overtime pay and may be excluded from payroll.

Participation in Network A certified workers compensation healthcare network is authorized in Chapter 1305 of the Texas Insurance Code and in Title 28, Chapter 10 of the Texas Administrative Code. An insurance carrier can either establish its own network for certification or can contract with a network that has been certified. The Department anticipates that certified workers compensation healthcare networks will help reduce the cost of workers compensation claims in Texas and that the cost savings, both anticipated and actual, should be passed on to policyholders participating in the networks in the form of a premium credit. The amount of the premium reduction, if applicable, is shown on the Information Page of the policy and is determined by applying the network credit factor to the applicable premium. Refer to the Texas Workers Compensation Premium Algorithm. The Texas Healthcare Network Endorsement (WC 42 04 08 A) must be attached to the policy if the policyholder elects to participate in a certified workers compensation healthcare network. Each insurance carrier is required to advise TDI whether it is offering a certified workers compensation healthcare network(s) to policyholders. Each carrier must provide the following information: 1. The percentage premium credit, if applicable, or 2. A statement indicating that the insurance carrier is not participating in certified workers compensation healthcare networks. The premium reduction may be prorated based on when during the policy period the election to participate or the election to terminate participation in the workers compensation healthcare network is made. The premium reduction may be forfeited if the carrier determines that the policyholder failed to provide to employees the information required in B-1 and/or B-2 below.
